Please provide any additional information about or descriptions of the supervised clinical experiences:

All students complete 80 days of full time student teaching (M-F, complete school day). Elementary candidates have two assignments of 8 weeks each, one in K-3 and one in 4-5. Middle Grades candidates have two 8 week assignments, one in each of their teaching certification areas. K-12 candidates have two 8 week assignments, one in elementary and one in middle grades/secondary. Special education candidates complete 8 weeks in a special education setting and the other 8 weeks in their other major (elementary, middle grades, or secondary). Secondary students complete all 16 weeks in one school and with one cooperating teacher. University Clinical Educators are required to have 4 formal observations, plus evaluate dispositions and required portfolio documents and reviews.

Teachers Prepared by Academic Major

Key terms in this section are listed below. Click on the link to view the definition(s) in the glossary.

- Academic Major

Please provide the number of teachers prepared by subject area for academic year 2022-23.

For the purposes of this section, number prepared means the number of program completers. "Subject area" refers to the subject area(s) an individual has been prepared to teach. An individual can be counted in more than one subject area. If no individuals were prepared in a particular subject area, please leave that cell blank. (§205\(b\)\(1\)\(H\))

What are CIP Codes?

No teachers prepared in academic year 2022-23

If your program has no teachers prepared, check the box above and leave the table below blank (or clear responses already entered).

What are CIP codes? The Classification of Instructional Programs (CIP) provides a taxonomic scheme that supports the accurate tracking and reporting of fields of study and program completions activity. CIP was originally developed by the U.S. Department of Education's National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) in 1980, with revisions occurring in 1985, 1990, and 2000 (<https://nces.ed.gov/ipeds/cipcode/Default.aspx?y=55>).

6. Prospective general education teachers are prepared to provide instruction to students from low-income families.

- Yes
 No

7. Prospective teachers are prepared to effectively teach in urban and rural schools, as applicable.

- Yes
 No

8. Describe your institution's most successful strategies in meeting the assurances listed above:

We fully collaborate with local school districts to determine how we can best meet their needs. The P-12 clinical educators are full partners with the university faculty and complete both dispositions and teaching assessments for each teacher candidate in their classroom. All education candidates are required to successfully complete, with a "C" or better, two courses (6 semester hours) on individuals with disabilities. Candidates interested in becoming certified in special education are required to be a double major. Special education candidates must major in either elementary, middle grades, or a secondary content area before they can also become a special education major. All undergraduate candidates are required to work with students from diverse backgrounds, including students with Limited English Proficiency, from low-income backgrounds, and with disabilities. In addition candidates are placed in a combination of urban, suburban and rural schools throughout their four semesters of field experiences.

Low-Performing

1. Is your teacher preparation program currently approved or accredited?

- Yes
- No

If yes, please specify the organization(s) that approved or accredited your program:

- State
- CAEP
- AAQEP
- Other specify:

2. Is your teacher preparation program currently under a designation as "low-performing" by the state?

- Yes
- No

1. Provide the following information about the use of technology in your teacher preparation program. Please note that choosing 'yes' indicates that your teacher preparation program would be able to provide evidence upon request. (§205\(a\)\(1\)\(F\))

Does your program prepare teachers to:

- a. integrate technology effectively into curricula and instruction

- Yes
 No

- b. use technology effectively to collect data to improve teaching and learning

- Yes
 No

- c. use technology effectively to manage data to improve teaching and learning

- Yes
 No

- d. use technology effectively to analyze data to improve teaching and learning

- Yes
 No

2. Provide a description of the evidence that your program uses to show that it prepares teachers to integrate technology effectively into curricula and instruction, and to use technology effectively to collect, manage, and analyze data in order to improve teaching and learning for the purpose of increasing student academic achievement. Include a description of the evidence your program uses to show that it prepares teachers to use the principles of universal design for learning, as applicable. Include planning activities and a timeline if any of the four elements listed above are not currently in place.

All students in the teacher preparation program are required to take "EDU 313: Instructional Technology" as a part of their admissions semester. Within this course, students are taught a variety of tools that support the integration of technology into K-12 curriculum. Students design learning units in Google Classroom where they incorporate technology to engage learners and address diverse needs. Examples of content developed by students are interactive Google Documents, student centered screencast videos, and formative assessment questions. Students also create a Google Form quiz or survey connected to curricular content. Students learn how to collect and analyze data to inform their future decisions for student learning and growth. Students also learn additional technology based tools for formative assessment (Nearpod, Poll Everywhere, Formative) to engage students and drive student learning based on results. Students are also given opportunities to practice universal design for learning principles within their projects by demonstrating content delivered in multiple ways (videos, use of educational podcasts) and offering activities for various learning styles. Differentiation, lesson planning, and activity generation are all practiced through various methods including the use of artificial intelligence. AI is used to assist student in the creation of multiple learning activities to adapt to student learning styles and abilities.

1. Provide a description of the activities that prepare general education teachers to:

a. Teach students with disabilities effectively

General education candidates are required to successfully complete, with a "C" or better, two courses (6 semester hours) designed for teaching students with disabilities. In the first course, candidates learn about the nature and needs of all of the disability categories covered under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), steps for referral for special education services, and assessment and identification practices. They also learn about the legal mandates covered under IDEA and their legal responsibilities to provide services to these students. In the second course, candidates learn about Universal Design for Learning (UDL), collaboration with special education teachers, and co-teaching strategies to ensure all students in the classroom receive an adequate education. In addition, candidates are required to develop lesson and unit plans to meet the needs of all students, including those with disabilities, based on the principles of UDL. As part of the reflections of each lesson and unit plan, as well as the holistic reflections included in their e Portfolios, candidates discuss the impact of their instruction on P-12 learning and the strategies they will use to increase student learning in the future. Furthermore, all general education candidates complete a unit on working with students with dyslexia, a reading disability that can severely impact learning for some students. This provides additional tools to address the needs of students with disabilities in the general education classroom.

b. Participate as a member of individualized education program teams, as defined in section 614(d)(1)(B) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

General education candidates learn about the IEP process in the courses described above. They learn not only their legal requirements and responsibilities, but also collaboration strategies and the nature and needs of disability which allows them to become more active participants on IEP teams, and more effective teachers to students with disabilities in their classrooms.

c. Effectively teach students who are limited English proficient.

The teacher education department completed a review of where/how information on students with disabilities and students with limited English proficiency was included in the education programs. The recommendation was made to include ELL information in the admissions' field experience, which is the first field experience for all education students. Information on limited English proficient students is also included in each lesson and unit plan, with candidates required to state how they will differentiate their strategies and activities to meet the needs of all students, including those with disabilities and limited English proficiency. They apply the principles of UDL to their lessons, ensuring all students benefit from instruction.

2. Does your program prepare special education teachers?

- Yes
 No

If yes, provide a description of the activities that prepare special education teachers to:

a. Teach students with disabilities effectively

Candidates completing their special education major and certification are required to complete an extra semester of coursework devoted to working with students with disabilities. This semester entails completion of a methods course, an assessment course, an applied behavior analysis course, and a field experience. In the assessment course, candidates learn to assess students with disabilities using both formal (norm-referenced) and informal (curriculum-based, observational) assessments. They assess a focus child in their field experience and complete a full assessment report. That information is then used by the candidates in the methods course. In that course, candidates develop a plan to address the needs found by their assessment. This plan becomes the basis for a response to intervention project, in which the candidates select and implement various teaching strategies, collect data, and analyze the results. The entire project is summarized in a formal response to intervention report for their focus student. Candidates also develop a behavior intervention plan for a student in their field experience. This plan, based on a functional assessment, is implemented and data are collected. Those data are analyzed and reported in a formal paper. During their culminating clinical experience (student teaching) special education candidates complete 8 weeks in a special education setting, working exclusively with special education teachers and students with disabilities, applying the knowledge gained from the special education focused semester.

b. Participate as a member of individualized education program teams, as defined in section 614(d)(1)(B) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

Candidates in special education also take the two special education courses that all general education majors take. They are taught the nature and needs of disability, the laws regarding providing services to individuals with disabilities in the classroom, developing individual education plans, and collaborating with general education teachers to ensure those plans are implemented with fidelity. Additionally, special education candidates are encouraged to attend IEP meetings during their field and clinical experiences. This is allowed if the parents or legal representative of the student with a disability provides consent for them to attend.

c. Effectively teach students who are limited English proficient.

The teacher education department completed a review of where/how information on students with disabilities and students with limited English proficiency was included in the education programs. The recommendation was made to include ELL information in the admissions' field experience, which is the first field experience for all education students. Information on limited English proficient students is also included in each lesson and unit plan, with candidates required to state how they will differentiate their strategies and activities to meet the needs of all students, including those with disabilities and limited English proficiency. They apply the principles of UDL to their lessons, ensuring all students benefit from instruction.
